The Increase in the Divorce List.

THE MICHAELMAS Cause Lists show the unprecedented total of 3,457 cases—unprecedented of recent years, and, we imagine, in any year. But it is due to the extraordinary growth of the Divorce List. Probate and Divorce causes are not separated, but the figure 2,025 (1,769 undefended) for the two classes no doubt represents in the main the Divorce List. It may be anticipated that this will give additional strength to the demand for provincial divorce jurisdiction; and the list is likely to be still further increased when the long overdue reform of the Divorce Law is taken in hand.

The Michaelmas Cause Lists.

IN THE remainder of the lists the Court of Appeal and the Chancery Division have an average amount of work, the appeal cases being 150, of which 94 are from the King's Bench Division and 16 are Workmen's Compensation cases; and the Chancery cases being 263, with 41 winding-up matters. A year ago the numbers were very much the same—165 appeals, 250 Chancery Division cases and 40 winding-up matters. Of course some years ago the appeals were much more numerous, but that was due to the accumulation of arrears. In the King's Bench Division there is a large increase of business, the total being 1,049, made up of 192 Divisional Court cases, 852 actions for trial and 5 bankruptcy matters. The highest previous total of recent years was 841 at Michaelmas 1913. The appeals include Blott's case (35 T. L. R. 687), in which ROWLATT, J., held that bonus shares were not liable to super-tax. The Land Value Duties cases—Smyth's case and Hunter's case—which have stood over since 1914, are still in the list. Probably there is no intention to proceed with them, the whole question of these duties being the subject of inquiry before a committee.

Mr. Justice Astbury on Present Troubles.

IT WOULD be beyond our province to deal critically with the important letter from Mr. Justice ASTBURY, which was published in Thursday's Times, but we are glad to call attention to it and to note the vigorous manner in which it deals with current financial and industrial problems. The Revenue authorities, with the Chancellor of the Exchequer at their head, know the hopeless pass to which finance has come, but show little inclination to stave off disaster. "The insane orgy of national and individual waste and extravagance that we have witnessed for many months past" is a warning which appears to pass unheeded. Mr. Justice ASTBURY's remedies are a ruthless cutting down of national expenditure, the restoration to the State of all war profits and a graduated emergency capital tax; and this is to "prevent the raising of the income tax beyond the limits of endurance." And then, for industry, a largely increased production, and as a means thereto the prevention of strikes by a system of compulsory arbitration, the protection of the Trade Disputes Act to be withdrawn in case of strikes preceding arbitration.

"If these reforms, including schemes of co-partnership and compulsory arbitration, were carried into effect, the real objects of the trade union legislation would be secured, the true ends and aspirations of trade unionism would be respected, and the position and prospects of the working man, loyal to the interests of his country and his class, would be immeasurably improved."

The Late Professor Oppenheim.

THE DEATH of Prof. OPPENHEIM, the WHEWELL Professor of International Law at Cambridge, creates a vacancy in the ranks of international jurists just at a time when they specially require strengthening. International law seemed to suffer eclipse during the war, but this was only temporary. The establishment of the League of Nations gives such a chance for it as has never occurred before, and it may be hoped that jurists here and abroad will take full advantage of the opportunity. Prof. OPPENHEIM published at the end of last year three lectures on "The League of Nations and Its Problems," which we reviewed at the time (ante, pp. 176, 189), and we regret that the scheme should lose the benefit of his further criticism and assistance. Trained in Germany he had the advantage of the legal science for which that country has long been famous, while in coming to England he acquired knowledge of the English way of working at legal problems, and at the same time became attached to his adopted country. It was one of the redeeming features of the period of war, now happily closed, that a jurist in Prof. OPPENHEIM'S position retained undiminished the esteem of fellow lawyers and students.

The Ratification of the Treaty of Peace.

IT HAS been announced that the treaties of peace with Germany and Austria were ratified by Italy on the 7th inst., and thus Italy is the first of the chief Allied and Associated Powers to take this final step. Under the Treaty of Peace Act passed on 31st July, the King is empowered by Order in Council to do all such things as are necessary for carrying out the Treaty, and this gives Parliamentary approval to the ratification. But the formal act of ratification is, it is stated, being delayed for this country until the Treaty has been approved by the Legislatures of the Dominions participating in the Peace Conference. This approval has now been given by New Zealand (2nd September) and Canada (12th September), and by the Senates of South Africa (12th September) and Australia (1st October): see the Times of the 8th inst. The French Chamber approved it on 2nd October, and the approval of the Senate will no doubt follow shortly. Germany has already ratified it, and under the provisions of the Treaty the deposit of ratifications can be effected as soon as the Treaty has been ratified by Germany and three of the principal Allied and Associated Powers. It may be expected, therefore, that this will take place shortly. But the treaty with Turkey remains to be made, and it would seem that the Order in Council required by the Termination of the Present War (Definition) Act, 1918, for defining the end of the war must wait till treaties have been made all round. The date to be declared by the Order "shall be as nearly as may be the date of the exchanges or deposit of ratifications of the treaty or treaties of peace."

The Control of the Railways.

THE RESULT of the Railway Strike has been that wages will be "stabilized" at their present level until 30th September, 1920, and no adult railwayman will receive less than 51s. so long as the cost of living is not less than 110 per cent. above pre-war level. This system of receiving wages on a sliding scale varying with prices is a little tantalizing to others who do not profit by it. It will be noticed that under the Transport Act the Government control of the railways is "stabilized"—a convenient, though somewhat novel, word—for two years while Parliament thinks what to do next; and if anyone expects that at the end of that time Government control will be unstabilized he must be of an unusually hopeful disposition. The present stabilization is founded on section 16 of the Regulation of the Forces Act, 1871, under which Government control was brought into operation on 4th August, 1914, by an Order in Council declaring a state of emergency, and a warrant of the Secretary for War which was good for a week and had been renewed weekly until the Transport Act. Now the renewal is unnecessary and the period of control has been stabilized for two years, as just stated. The 1871 Act provides for payment of compensation, the amount, if not agreed upon, to be determined by arbitration under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. But it was agreed upon in September, 1914, and is calculated in a roundabout way which reminds one of the formula for full site value under the Finance Act, 1910. In effect the Government pays the 1913 profits and does not account for its own use of the railways. During the war the system of Government control was operated by the Railway Executive Committee. This has now given place to the Minister of Transport, who gives directions as to rates and fares (subject to reference to an advisory committee), and as to salaries and wages. It is not obvious that there is much left for the directors to do, and, from their own particular point of view, their position would seem to be badly in want of stabilizing. Even the old rivalry between the lines is not left to them, for the Minister can give directions for securing co-operation between the railways. It may be hoped that in practice this will mean that tickets between the same places will be available by the trains of any company, especially when they run on the same line. This small reform would show that the Ministry intend to be useful.

The Future of Germans in the Allied Countries.

WE ARE obliged to Mr. RICHARD KING for the translation of an article on the legal position in the future of Germans in the Allied and Associated countries by Dr. CARL MELCHIOR, of Hamburg, which appeared in the Berliner Tageblatt of 22nd July. The provisions of the Treaty are no doubt such as to make the Germans anxious as to the possibility of having dealings and holding property in the countries recently at war with them. A useful statement of these provisions is given in a pamphlet "Claims against the German Government and against the Germans under the Peace Treaty," by Mr. W. H. EHRHARDT (Sweet & Maxwell, Ltd., 1s. net), and those which are most important are cited in Dr. MELCHIOR'S article. They are (1) Art. 297n under which the Allied and Associated Powers reserve to themselves the right to retain and liquidate all property, rights and interests of German subjects which are situated in their territories, and meanwhile the German proprietor cannot, without the consent of the State concerned, dispose of or mortgage such property; (2) Section 9 of the Appendix to Arts. 297, 298, which provides that, until the liquidation is complete, the property of German subjects shall be subject to extraordinary war measures; and (3) Section 18 of Appendix II. to Part VIII (Reparation), under which, in case of wilful non-execution by Germany, the Allied and Associated Powers are to be entitled to adopt such economical and financial prohibitions and acts of retaliation as they consider necessary.

The Consequences of Non-Execution of the Treaty.

AS TO (1) (supra) it appears to have been agreed that the property liable to liquidation is the property existing at ratification of the Treaty, so that this liability will shortly be ascertained. Liquidation, no doubt, includes the realization of the property, and also the disposal of the proceeds. What part, if any, of these proceeds will go to the German owner is a matter not dealt with in the article. We suspect the whole, after payment of specific encumbrances, will be retained, the owner being left to recover against his own Government. The extraordinary war measures referred to under (2) Dr. MELCHIOR does not define. Apparently they are measures required to effect the liquidation. His chief concern is in regard to possible acts of prohibition and retaliation under (3). These assume a wilful non-execution of the Treaty, but he points out—as is generally, we believe, admitted—that the obligations of the Treaty are quite impossible. There is sure to be non-execution, and any Power which chooses to call this wilful can retaliate on German property, and thus all German dealings in the Allied and Associated countries will be insecure. He concludes:—

"From the foregoing it appears that the legal situation for German interests and individuals in the hostile countries is for the time being absolutely hopeless. That does not exclude that in a number of hostile countries the practice will develop differently. Many of them will have no interest to make the intercourse in banking, insurance, &c., with Germany impossible, even in the future, and thus divert the business wholly to neutral countries. It may be supposed, too, that in the hostile countries moral resistances will grow up and be opposed to an actual use being made of the powers conferred under the Peace Treaty in regard to the permanent placing of the German interests outside the law."

We imagine that this represents the probable course of events. It will be as little to British interest (for instance) as to German interest for the ordinary play of economic facilities and intercourse to be interfered with, and already the circumstances which gave the Treaty its harsher features are being modified. And if, as is obviously the right course, Germany secures early admission to the League of Nations, economic equality will, as Dr. MELCHIOR suggests, naturally follow.

Fraudulent Acquisition of Property in Chattels.

THE DISTINCTION between obtaining goods by means of a fraud and actual larceny is well illustrated in Phillips v. Brooks (1919, 2 K. B. 243), and the case is also noteworthy as being a decision professedly following an American decision. The plaintiff (a jeweller) sued the defendants (pawnbrokers) for the return or value of a ring. The ring had been bought from the plaintiff by a person who personated Sir GEORGE BULLOUGH, and had been paid for by a worthless cheque. The contention of the plaintiff was that no property in the ring passed to the purchaser, since he (the plaintiff) intended to sell only to Sir G. BULLOUGH. The defence was that there had been no larceny by a trick, and that it was immaterial that the plaintiff believed he was dealing with Sir G. BULLOUGH. Mr. Justice HORRIDGE gave judgment for the defendants, with whom the ring had been pledged by the person who obtained it from the plaintiff. The learned Judge based his judgment on the American case of Edmunds v. Merchants' Despatch Transportation Co. (1883, 135 Mass. 283), the headnote of which contains this proposition: "If A., fraudulently assuming the name of a reputable merchant in a certain town, buys, in person, goods of another, the property in the goods passes to A." The following passage from the judgment was also quoted: "His intention was to sell to the person present, and identified by sight and hearing; it does not defeat the sale because the buyer assumed a false name, or practised any other deceit to induce the vendor to sell."

Personation by a Purchaser.

THE ABOVE American case did, in point of fact, adopt the principle laid down in Cundy v. Lindsay by Lord CAIRNS (1878, 3 App. Cas. 459, 464), and the latter case was also cited by Mr. Justice HORRIDGE. Lord CAIRNS pointed out that a sale fraudulently induced might be voidable, though not void so as to defeat the title of subsequent purchasers for value. The plaintiff relied on the following passage from POTHIER: "Whenever the consideration of the person with whom I am willing to contract enters as an element into the contract which I am willing to make, error with regard to the person destroys my consent, and consequently annuls the contract." Mr. Justice HORRIDGE, however, thought that this passage did not apply to the present case, "because I think the seller intended to contract with the person present, and there was no error as to the person with whom he contracted, although the plaintiff would not have made the contract if there had not been a fraudulent misrepresentation." Although held not to apply to the case here referred to, the passage from POTHIER above cited was quoted with approval by Mr. Justice FRY in Smith v. Wheatcroft (1878, 9 Ch. D. 223, 230).

The Draft Licensing Bill.

WE HAVE received from Messrs. BUTTERWORTH & Co. a copy of the "Provisional Draft of a Licensing Bill framed by the Licensed Trade of England and Wales on the principles of which the various sections are in agreement." Details of the Bill have been published in the daily Press, and we have recently commented on some of its aspects. Its promoters have found it necessary to proceed on the lines of a completely new Bill, and not by amendments to the Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910; but the general structure of that Act has been followed, and notes are appended which enable the clauses of the draft Bill to be compared with the corresponding sections of the Act. To the numerous classes interested this issue of the draft Bill will be very convenient. The price is 1s. 6d. net (postage 2½d.).

Joint Contractors.

EVERY contract, of course, involves at least two parties. But any one of the parties to a contract may consist of more than one person, and the commonest illustration of this is the case of a partnership being a party to a contract. For many purposes, and from the point of view of the other party, the persons who constitute the partnership are regarded as a single juridical person, though inter se they are joint contractors. Any two or more persons may, however, jointly contract with another party, and to some extent these joint contractors are treated as though they were partners. But in many respects the position of a joint contractor is sui generis, and even at the present day his rights and liabilities cannot be said to be completely settled. So long as the co-contractors are at harmony among themselves, no difficulty is likely to occur. But suppose they disagree. What if their disagreement goes so far as to end in one joint contractor desiring to put an end to the contract, whilst his co-contractor wishes to proceed with it and carry it through to execution? The failure of the co-contractor to agree as to whether the contract shall or shall not be enforced against the other party to it occasionally gives rise to some rather nice questions.

Unless the other party to a contract with joint contractors fails to perform his part of it, it is clear that one of the joint contractors cannot by any arrangement with the other party, against the wish of his co-contractor, put an end to the contract. Thus, if what is sometimes called an "anticipatory breach" of the contract is committed, that is, if the other party merely states his intention of not carrying out the contract when the time for performance arrives, one joint contractor cannot alone assume to treat this expression of intention as a breach of contract. Nor can one joint contractor alone accept a renunciation of the other party's agreement, and so put an end to the whole contract. These propositions are elementary. But in the event of a good cause of action against the other party accruing to the joint contractors by reason of some act or default with respect to the contract and its performance, any one of the joint contractors is at liberty to insist on the contract being fulfilled or on requiring damages for its breach, notwithstanding that his co-contractor may not desire to take any such steps. It is at this point that the disagreement between the joint contractors becomes of practical interest and importance.

Prima facie one joint contractor cannot sue on the contract unless his co-contractor is also a party to the action. By R.S.C. ord. 16, r. 11, "no person shall be added as a plaintiff . . . without his own consent in writing thereto." And a joint contractor is not bound, even though an indemnity against costs to be tendered to him, to allow his name to be added as a plaintiff: Cullen v. Knowles (1898, 2 Q. B. 380). The question was raised in this case whether a joint contractor, whose co-contractor had refused to be made a plaintiff, could thereupon join him as a defendant. It was held by Lord MERSEY (then Mr. Justice BIGHAM) that the unwilling joint contractor could be made a defendant, and the analogy of co-mortgagees and co-trustees being joined as defendants under the Chancery practice was adopted and acted on: "I can see no difference between this case and the cases on the Chancery side of several co-mortgagees, where it is clear that co-mortgagees who are unwilling to join as plaintiffs can be made defendants in an action by one of the co-mortgagees to foreclose." In Cullen v. Knowles the joint contractors were owners and vendors of a patent, and were suing the purchaser of the patent for the purchase money. An indemnity against costs had also been tendered by the plaintiff to his co-contractor.

On principle there seems no reason why this decision should not be extended to cases where the joint contractors are not co-owners of property, and where no indemnity against costs has been tendered. A recent Australian case is authority for such an extension, and may be usefully consulted by the English practitioner: see Lion White Lead (Limited) v. Rogers (1919, 75 Commonw. L. R. 533) (appeal from New South Wales). The respondent ROGERS was plaintiff in the action, and the appellants were purchasers of a valuable patent owned by the plaintiff. The plaintiff and one BLACKMAN (a defendant) had jointly entered into an agreement for the sale of the plaintiff's patent, BLACKMAN having no proprietary interest in the patent. The purchasers having failed to carry out the terms of the sale agreement, the plaintiff took proceedings on the equity side of the Court to be discharged from the agreement, and he made BLACKMAN a defendant without requesting him to be a co-plaintiff and without tendering him any indemnity against costs. It was held that the plaintiff was within his rights in so making BLACKMAN a defendant, and Cullen v. Knowles was relied on. The case, though going beyond Cullen v. Knowles, seems one that should be followed in other jurisdictions. One of the judgments delivered in the Australian court contains a very clear statement of the position of joint contractors in relation to breaches by the other party to the contract.

The Law of Workmen's Combinations.

WE referred briefly last week (ante, p. 823), in connection with the recent railway strike, to the existing statute law which recognizes the legality of trade unions. The course of legislation on this subject forms one of the most important features in the social life of the last hundred years or so, and it is worth while to deal with the matter somewhat more fully. The literature on the subject is extensive, and includes technical discussions of the law such as are to be found in STEPHEN'S History of the Criminal Law, Vol. III., chap. 30, and the Report in 1906 of the Royal Commission on Trade Disputes and Trade Combinations [Cd. 2825], and popular accounts, such as that in Chap. VII. of "The Town Labourer," 1760-1832, by J. L. HAMMOND and BARBARA HAMMOND (1917), and the numerous authorities therein referred to.

At the close of the eighteenth century—we need not go into the earlier law on the subject of wages—the attempt of workmen to raise their wages by combination was regarded by the masters as so mischievous as to call for the intervention of the Legislature, and PITT was induced to take the matter up. A Bill was introduced in June 1799, and was rapidly passed through all its stages and became law as 39 Geo. 3, c. 81. Under this Act combination between workmen to obtain an increase of wages or a decrease of hours was punishable before a single magistrate with three months' imprisonment or two months' hard labour; and any steps taken in order directly or indirectly to produce the same results, as by attending meetings or persuading a worker to leave his work, had the same results. A right of appeal to Quarter Sessions was given, but in practice it was useless, and removal of a conviction by certiorari was expressly forbidden. There had been no time for workmen to organise themselves against this measure, but the next year there were petitions from all parts of the country urging its reconsideration, and SHERIDAN took a leading part in presenting the workmen's case. But as it was impracticable to obtain the repeal of the Act, its opponents bent their efforts to amending it, and by 39 and 40 Geo. 3, c. 106, some of its worst features were removed. Two magistrates were substituted for one as the tribunal; a master affected was forbidden to sit on it; the words "wilfully and maliciously" were substituted for "directly or indirectly" in the definition of offences; and certain arbitration clauses were added. At the same time combination between the masters was forbidden, but in a very different manner. A workman was compellable to give evidence against himself, but not so a master, and in practice combination between the masters could not be touched; while, if a prosecution should succeed, the punishment was not imprisonment, as in the case of the man, but a fine.

The resulting oppression of the workmen can be read in the evidence taken by the Committee on Artizans and Machinery over which HUME presided in 1824. Workmen had to submit to any arbitrary reduction of wages under pain of going to prison if they stopped work under the least suspicion of concerted action. It is astonishing how many iniquities were done under cover of the law just before the commencement of the reforming era in the nineteenth century, but quite possibly posterity a hundred years hence will be saying the same thing about these present times. At any rate, it was felt that total prohibition of combination had carried the matter too far, and in 1824 the above Acts were repealed by 5 Geo. 4, c. 95, and combinations to obtain an advance of wages or to lessen the hours of work were declared not to be subject to prosecution for conspiracy or to other criminal proceedings; provisions were, however, inserted to restrain acts of coercion. This was a great victory for the workmen, but they were not able to maintain the whole of their advantage. The Act was replaced in the following year by 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, which allowed workmen to meet to discuss wages and hours, but introduced so many specific offences as to make the permission of little value. Among other matters it prohibited, without defining, molestation and obstruction, and, "under this head, and also under the head of common law conspiracy to injure, workmen were in Reg. v. Rowlands (1851, 17 Q. B. 671) convicted of an offence, although what they had done was by way of peaceful persuading" (Report of Royal Commission on Trade Disputes, &c., 1906, p. 10). In consequence of this decision the amending Act of 1859 (22 Vict., c. 34) provided that no person should, by reason merely of his endeavouring peaceably and in a reasonable manner, and without threats or intimidation, direct or indirect, to persuade others to cease or abstain from work in order to obtain certain rates of wages or hours of work, be deemed guilty of molestation or obstruction within the Act of 1825. "The Combination Laws," it is said in "The Town Labourer" (p. 141) "gave the masters unlimited power to reduce wages and to make conditions more severe. They established the new industry [that is the enormously extended industry due to the introduction of machinery] on a basis of exploited labour, wages representing not the share of the working classes in the new wealth, however that share might be assessed, but the degree of misery to which men and women, forbidden to defend themselves, might be reduced in this or that place, and this or that trade, in the wild competition of the forces that used and ruled them."

The latter part of the nineteenth century and the beginning of the present has seen the reversal of the above policy and the firm establishment of the right of workmen to combine for their own protection. The process has gone on by the action of statute law, partly in repealing previous statutes, partly in overriding judicial decisions where these were adverse to trade unions. The first step was taken by the two Acts of 1871—The Trade Union Act, 1871, and Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. cc. 31, 32). The former of these placed trade unions on a definitely legal basis, section 2 providing: "The purposes of any trade union shall not, by reason merely that they are in restraint of trade, be deemed to be unlawful, so as to render any member of such trade union liable to criminal prosecution for conspiracy or otherwise"; and subsequent sections provided for the registry of trade unions, for vesting their property in trustees, and as to actions by and against trustees; further, section 12 enabled embezzlement by the officers of a trade union to be punishable. Formerly there was no remedy in such a case, since a trade union was an unlawful association; Hornby v. Close (L. R. 2 Q. B. 153). This was met temporarily by 32 & 33 Vict., c. 61, and permanently by the Trade Union Act, 1871. The Criminal Law Amendment Act of the same year repealed the Combination Act of 1825 and the Amending Act of 1859, and (shortly stated) forbade the use of violence, threats, or molestation or obstruction with a view to coercing either masters or men in the course of business or work, and molestation and obstruction were defined so as to include watching or besetting the house or place where a person resided or worked. But this Act—the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1871—was repealed by the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875, and section 3 of the latter Act placed an important check upon prosecution for conspiracy:—

"An agreement or combination by two or more persons to do or procure to be done any act in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute between employers and workmen shall not be indictable as a conspiracy if such act committed by one person would not be punishable as a crime."

And section 7 replaced the provisions of the Act of 1871 as to intimidation. Thus intimidation was to include "watching and besetting," but not the attending at or near a house or works for the purpose merely of obtaining or communicating information. Whether this forbade "watching and besetting" for the purpose of peaceable persuasion, i.e., "picketing," was doubtful until it was decided by the Court of Appeal in Lyons & Sons v. Wilkins (1899, 1 Ch. 255) that such action was not authorized by the section.

Section 3, as was pointed out in the Trade Disputes Report (p. 13), made it perfectly clear in what cases combinations to do acts in furtherance or contemplation of trade disputes between employers and workmen involved criminal responsibility. Subject to certain exceptions specified in the Act, no combination to commit any act which, if done by one person would not be an offence punishable by imprisonment, can be the foundation of criminal proceedings. But this did not touch the civil action for conspiracy, and the omission was supplied, in pursuance of the recommendation of the Commission, by the Trade Disputes Act, 1906, which added to section 3 of the Act of 1875 the following paragraph:—

"An act done in pursuance of an agreement or combination by two or more persons shall, if done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute, not be actionable unless the act, if done without any such agreement or combination, would be actionable."

Whether, apart from this, there could be a civil action for conspiracy where no criminal prosecution would lie was a question which the Commission regarded as doubtful. According to the Memorandum prepared by the late Mr. ARTHUR COHEN, K.C. (Report, p. 20), conspiracy could not be the foundation of a civil action unless it was a criminal conspiracy. But as regards trade disputes the point was settled by the Act of 1906. The same Act also by section 2 supplied the omission in the Act of 1875 which had been brought into prominence by Lyons & Co. v. Wilkins (supra), and, by introducing a new paragraph in the place of the last paragraph of section 7 of the Act of 1875, expressly legalized "peaceful picketing"—i.e., the attending at or near a house or place of working for the purpose of peacefully persuading any person to work or abstain from working.

It is a further question how this special legislation is related to the principles developed by leading cases such as The Mogul Case (1892, A. C. 25), Allen v. Flood (1898, A. C. 1), and Quinn v. Leathem (1901, A. C. 495), but into this we cannot now enter.

CASES OF THE WEEK.

Before the Vacation Judge.

Re BUSSELL, INFANTS. 28th August.

PRACTICE—SUMMONS FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS—ORDER FOR CUSTODY OF CHILDREN—FACTS IN DISPUTE—JURISDICTION OF JUDGE.

The appellant, a married woman, left her husband, taking with her the two children of the marriage. As soon as the husband discovered where the wife had gone to, he took out a summons for a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum. In his affidavit in support he alleged that the appellant was not a fit and proper person to have absolute control and charge of the children, and stated that, unless the children were in his control by a certain date, nominations he had obtained for them at public schools would be cancelled. The wife made an affidavit denying the allegations of her husband, and stating that she was applying for a judicial separation, and that the custody of the children could only properly be decided in those proceedings. Roche, J., made an order giving the father the custody of the children. The wife appealed.

Held, that the facts being in dispute, Roche, J., had no jurisdiction to make a final order, and the order appealed from must be set aside. The Court directed that the husband should apply for a writ of habeas corpus requiring the children to be brought before the judge in chambers, when all the facts could be dealt with, and the question of the custody and control of the children decided.

Appeal from an order of Roche, J., in chambers.

On 4th July, 1919, the appellant, Mrs. Bussell, left the respondent, her husband, taking the two children of the marriage, a girl and a boy aged respectively eleven and nine years, with her. After considerable search the husband found out where she had gone to, and on the 18th July he applied by summons, supported by an affidavit, for a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum. The affidavit set out that while the mother would carefully see to the health and happiness of the children, she was not a fit and proper person to have their absolute control, because she was likely to neglect their education. The husband stated that he had obtained nominations for the girl to go as a boarder to Caversham School and the boy to Bradford College at reduced fees, and that if the children were not in his custody when the school terms opened the nominations would be cancelled. The appellant made an affidavit denying the allegations of her husband, and charging him with misconduct. She further said that the respondent had been guilty of cruelty, and she was petitioning for a judicial separation. Upon the hearing of the summons, Roche, J., ordered (inter alia) that the respondent should have the custody of the children. The wife appealed on the ground that there was no jurisdiction on the hearing of a summons to make an order as if a return to the writ had been made. The facts being in dispute, the only competent order was one directing a writ to issue. For the respondent it was contended that the order was one commonly made. That the mere fact that the wife was taking proceedings to obtain a judicial separation was not enough to oust the husband's common law right to the control and custody of the children, especially in a case where advantageous arrangements he had made for their education would be cancelled before the question of separation could be tried.

THE EARL OF READING, U.J., said that the order appealed from could not stand, for it was an order finally determining the custody of the children made on disputed facts, and therefore without jurisdiction. They had not, any more than the learned judge had, sufficient facts before them to decide the point. The respondent would not be prejudiced by the order which the Court was about to make. That order would be that the order of the learned judge should be rescinded, and a writ of habeas corpus issued instead to bring the two children up before him in chambers, when the facts could be dealt with, and he could form a proper conclusion upon all the facts. The Court would see that the matter should be dealt with by him within the next few days, before therefore the school term would begin either at Caversham School or Bradford College. The costs of this application would be left to the judge at chambers to deal with. The conduct of the writ would be in the father's hands.—COUNSEL, for the appellant, W. Higgins; for the respondent, B. Campion. SOLICITORS, R. S. Smallman; Sharpe, Pritchard, & Co.

[Reported by ENAIXES REID, Barrister-at-Law.]

The Charity Commissioners, says the Times, have ordered a public inquiry into the proposed sale of land on the College estate, Stratford-on-Avon. It will be held at the Town Hall, on Thursday next, 16th October, by Mr. G. W. Wallace, an Assistant Commissioner. Attention was first directed to the proposed sale in the Times of 21st, 23rd and 24th May. It was again referred to in the Estate Market column of 23rd August and of 3rd September, and Sir Sidney Lee wrote a letter, which appeared on 2nd September. The proposal of the Corporation of Stratford-on-Avon is to sell some 6½ acres, for the purposes of a metal factory, for £1,575, or £242 an acre.

Board of Trade Orders.

THE PROFITEERING ACT, 1919, Order (No. 2).

Whereas Section 1 of the Profiteering Act, 1919, provides that the Act may be applied by order of the Board of Trade to any article or class of articles declared by the Order to be one or one of a kind in common use by the public, or being material, machinery or accessories used in the production of such articles, but that the Act shall not apply to any articles which are from time to time declared to be controlled articles,

Now, therefore, the Board of Trade do hereby declare motor spirit used or capable of being used for supplying motive power to motor vehicles, whether taxed or not, to be an article in common use by the public, and do hereby order that the Profiteering Act, 1919, shall apply to such motor spirit.

This Order shall come into force forthwith, and may be cited as the Profiteering Act, 1919, Order (No. 3).

1st October.

THE PROFITEERING ACT, 1919, MAXIMUM PRICES ORDER, 1919.

[Substituted for the Profiteering Act, 1919, Maximum Prices Order (No. 1).]

Whereas under Section 1 (1) (a) of the profiteering Act, 1919, the Board of Trade have power in respect of any article to which the Act is applied to investigate prices, costs and profit at all stages and on any such investigation by Order to fix maximum prices:

And whereas by Order dated the 1st October, 1919, the Act was applied to motor spirit used or capable of being used for supplying motive power to vehicles whether taxed or not:

Now, therefore, the Board of Trade, in the exercise of the above recited powers, do hereby fix the prices set out in the Schedule hereto as the maximum prices which may be charged on the sale of such spirit.

The Profiteering Act, 1919, Maximum Prices Order (No. 1) [1st October, Gazette 3rd October], is hereby revoked.

This Order shall come into force forthwith, and may be cited as the Profiteering Act, 1919, Maximum Prices Order (No. 2).

Ministry of Food Orders.

THE FOOD CONTROL COMMITTEES AND JOINT FOOD CONTROL COMMITTEES AMENDMENT ORDER, 1919.

1.—(a) The term of office of the persons constituting a Food Control Committee, or a Joint Food Control Committee which would under the Food Control Committees (Constitution) Order, 1917, as amended (hereinafter called the "First Principal Order"), or the Joint Food Control Committees (Constitution) Order, 1918, as amended (hereinafter called the "Second Principal Order") [S.R. & O., No. 869 of 1917, and Nos. 776 and 1244 of 1918], be until the 18th November, 1919, shall be extended until the 30th June, 1920, provided that the term of office of a person appointed on or after the 18th November, 1919, to fill a casual vacancy shall in like manner be until the 30th June, 1920, and the First and Second Principal Orders shall be modified accordingly.

(b) All the provisions of the First and Second Principal Orders as modified by this Order shall apply to a Committee during such extended term of office in like manner as they applied during the year commencing on the 18th November, 1918.

2. The Food Controller, where it appears to him desirable with a view to economy of administration or otherwise, may at any time direct that a Local Authority shall enter into an arrangement with any other Local Authority or Authorities for the appointment of a Joint Food Control Committee, and may himself appoint a Joint Food Control Committee for the districts of any Local Authorities in the place of the Food Control Committees appointed by such Authorities, and may give all necessary and consequential directions. Except so far as the Food Controller shall otherwise direct, a Joint Food Control Committee appointed under this Clause shall be deemed to be a Joint Food Control Committee duly appointed under the Second Principal Order.

3. This Order may be cited as the Food Control Committees and Joint Food Control Committees Amendment Order, 1919, and shall be read as one with the First and Second Principal Orders.

(a) Butter sold or purchased for delivery in the United Kingdom under a contract in writing dated before the 9th September, 1919.

(b) Butter consigned to a person in the United Kingdom and afloat on or before the 9th September, 1919.

2. Every person owning or having power to dispose of, either on his own behalf or on behalf of any other person, any butter which is outside the United Kingdom at or after the date of this Order, shall on or before the 16th September, 1919, furnish to the Director of Butter Supplies, Ministry of Food, New County Hall, London, S.E., a return showing:—

(a) the amount, description, method of packing and country of origin of butter shipped to the United Kingdom to him or to his order and afloat on the 9th September, 1919;

(b) the amount, description, method of packing and country of origin of butter purchased for shipment to the United Kingdom to him or to his order and not shipped on the 9th September, 1919;

(c) the amount of butter sold and unsold in each case;

and shall furnish copies of original invoices and such other documents and particulars as may from time to time be required by or under the authority of the Food Controller.

3. This Order may be cited as the Imported Butter (Restriction) Order, 1919.

The Austrian Debt Default.

A Reuter's message from Vienna, of 25th September, says: The Finance Ministry announces that the payments in connection with the Austrian debt are provisionally suspended.

The Times adds the following:—The news that Austria has defaulted on her National Debt was fully expected by those acquainted with the parlous condition of her finances. A banker who has just returned from a visit to that country early this week said default was a certainty within a very short time. A certain amount of Austrian securities are held here, but fortunately they have never been popular with the British investor, who has always refused to interest himself in the finance of the "ramshackle Empire." The Special Debt of Austria on 13th February, 1918, was equivalent to £2,253,456,903, of which rather more than one-half represented war debt. Interest on this debt requires £91,500,000 yearly. Eight war loans were issued by Austria during the war, resulting in a subscription of 35,075 million crowns (the par value of the crown in sterling being 10d.). Seven Austrian loans are known to the London market, the chief of which is the £16,525,000 Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Treasury Notes issued here and on the Continent in April, 1914. Only one coupon was ever paid on that part of the loan held in this country.

Austria had made default on two occasions during last century. In the Napoleonic wars the finances of Austria declined steadily. In 1803 the export of gold was prohibited in order to alleviate the gold famine. But this measure was unavailing. The war of 1809 aggravated conditions so much that a decree was issued ordering all silver in private possession to be surrendered against paper money. Still the debt piled up, and in 1811 the interest on the State debt was reduced by one-half.

About the middle of the century the finances of Austria, which for years had been in a dubious position, were again in a critical state by the outbreak of the war with Italy in 1859. Even before the war the Austrian Government had exhausted its credit, and specie payments had been stopped. They were to have been resumed in January, 1859, but in the early course of the war the promise of a restoration of specie payments was annulled for the time being by the State itself, and it proceeded to finance the war by the issue of a loan, which the Finance Minister was empowered to negotiate at the National Bank at two-thirds of the nominal value of the bonds.

A Committee on Time.

The Home Secretary has appointed a Committee to consider and report as to the advisability of adopting in the United Kingdom for official and other public purposes the "twenty-four" method of expressing time.

The members of the Committee are:—

Major J. L. Baird, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.P., Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Chairman).

Lord Ashton of Hyde.

Mr. John Cairns, M.P.

Sir Francis Dent, General Manager, South-Eastern Railway Company.

Captain J. M. Harvey, Board of Trade.

Mr. A. Maxwell, Home Office.

Captain Webster, R.N., Admiralty.

The secretary of the Committee is Mr. E. W. N. Holderness, and any communications on the subject of the inquiry should be addressed to him at the Home Office, Whitehall, S.W. 1.

The End of the War.

A Reuter's message from Paris, of 7th October, says:—The Chamber of Deputies to-day unanimously adopted a Bill which declares that:—

For the execution of laws, decrees, regulations and contracts, the application of which was subordinated to the state of war, the date of the official promulgation of the Bill authorizing the President of the Republic to ratify the Treaty with Germany will be that of the cessation of hostilities.

M. Nail, Minister of Justice, said that the Bill was the symbolic action signifying the end of the war. It put an end to the censorship. If there were any delay in the Senate voting on the Treaty, the Government might consider the question of postponing the date.

The Profiteering Act.

The machinery for the hearing of complaints of profiteering in sales by wholesale, says the Times, is now in existence. There is no official form on which to lodge a complaint. All that a complainant has to do is to state his facts in writing, and deliver it to the Secretary, Complaints Standing Committee, Profiteering Act Department, 54, Victoria-street, S.W. 1, within seven days of the date of the transaction to which the complaint relates, giving the following particulars:—The date of the transaction; the conditions under which it was entered into; the names and addresses of the parties; the precise nature of the goods; and the price paid or demanded.

Complaints will be considered by the Committee, who will decide whether a prima-facie case has been made out and, if so, appoint a tribunal to hear the case. Complainants must be prepared to attend before such a tribunal and give evidence on oath. They may conduct their own case or appoint some other person for the purpose.

The foregoing refers only to wholesale transactions. Complaints against retailers should be addressed to the Local Profiteering Committee.

Obituary.

Professor Oppenheim.

We regret to announce that Professor LASSA FRANCIS LAWRENCE OPPENHEIM, Whewell Professor of International Law at Cambridge since 1903, died there on Tuesday.

Professor Oppenheim was the son of Aaron Oppenheim, of Frankfurt-on-Main, and was born in Germany on 30th March, 1858. He was educated at Frankfurt and at the Universities of Göttingen, Heidelberg, Berlin and Leipzig. He made his mark as a jurist before leaving his native country. He was the author of numerous legal publications in German between 1885 and 1898. In 1886 he became a lecturer at the University of Freiburg (Baden) and extraordinary professor in 1889, and professor of law in the University of Basel in 1891.

On his settling in England his position as a jurist was at once recognized, and he became a lecturer at the London School of Economics in 1895. He had been working for ten years at the School of Economics before his treatise on International Law appeared. The first volume, entitled "Peace," was published in 1905; the second volume, "War and Neutrality," in 1906. Both volumes passed into a second edition in 1912, and the work gained for its author such a reputation that, when Professor Westlake retired from the Whewell Professorship in 1908, Dr. Oppenheim was chosen to succeed him.

Professor Oppenheim, says the Times, was the fourth holder of the chair founded in accordance with the will of William Whewell, some time Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1867. Sir (then Mr.) William Vernon Harcourt was the first holder, some years after his famous letters in (the Times) columns, signed "Historicus." He was Professor, the somewhat peripatetic professor, until 1887. He was succeeded by one of the greatest jurists of the nineteenth century, Sir Henry James Sumner Maine, who forty years before had been appointed Regius Professor of Civil Law in the same University, and had held the Corpus Professorship of Jurisprudence at Oxford from 1869 to 1878. Maine was succeeded by John Westlake, who held the chair for twenty years, and added to its lustre. Professor Oppenheim, in the eleven years that he worked, did much for his subject, and not only lectured with thoroughness, but wrote and published much, including books on "The Science of International Law" (1908), "The Future of International Law" (1911), and "The Panama Canal Conflict" (1913), and "The League of Nations and its Problems," published last year.

Professor Oppenheim married in 1902 a daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Phineas Cowan, and leaves a daughter.

Sir C. E. Chadwyck-Healey, K.C.

Sir CHARLES EDWARD CHADWYCK-HEALEY died last Sunday after a short illness.

Sir Charles, who was created a baronet in the honours list of April, 1919, for his valuable service on the Admiralty Transport Arbitration Board, was born in August, 1845, and was the eldest son of Mr. E. C. Healey, of Wyphurst, Cranley, Surrey. He was called to the Bar by Lincoln's Inn in 1872, and soon attained a large practice. He specialized in company law, and wrote a book on companies, which at the time was largely used. A third edition, in which the author was assisted by Mr. F. F. Wheeler, appeared in 1894. Sir Charles took silk in 1891, and acted as Chancellor of the diocese of Exeter, after serving in a similar capacity as Chancellor of Bath and Wells.

Sir Charles Chadwyck-Healey was keenly interested in naval matters. He became a captain in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve in 1914, after being long a commander. He served as Chairman of the Admiralty Transport Arbitration Board (1914); he commanded Hospital Ship No. 15, Queen Alexandra, 1915-17; and there was little connected with the history of the R.N.V.R. in which he had not shared.

Sir Charles was twice married, first in 1872 to Rosa, daughter of Mr. John Close, and secondly in 1884 to Frances Katharine, daughter of Mr. W. K. Wait, formerly M.P. for Gloucester. She died in 1909. By his first wife he leaves a son, Gerald Edward, the heir to the title, who was born in 1873 and married in 1897 Mary Verena, daughter of Mr. G. A. Watson, of East Court, Finchampstead. By his second marriage he leaves issue two sons, Major Oliver Novell Chadwyck-Healey, Royal Berkshire Regiment, and Captain Hilary Philip Chadwyck-Healey, East Surrey Regiment.

Legal News.

Appointments.

The name of Mr. WALTER SPYER, of 226, Finchley-road, Hampstead, has been inserted in the Commission of the Peace for the county of London. Mr. Spyer was formerly senior partner in the firm of Spyer & Sons, solicitors, in the city of London, but has retired from active practice for some time.

Mr. CHARLES FREDERICK LOWENTHAL has been appointed to be Recorder of Huddersfield. Mr. Lowenthal, who was called to the Bar by the Middle Temple in 1888, has been junior counsel to the Commissioners of Works and to the Inland Revenue in licensing matters.

Changes in Partnerships.

Business Changes.

Messrs. LOXLEY & GARDNER, of 80, Chesham-street, London, E.C. 2, have taken into partnership Mr. Edward Owen Sewell, and the practice will be carried on in future under the name of Messrs. Loxley, Gardner & Sewell.

The practice as solicitors and notary carried on by GEO. F. F. WHITE and E. AUBREY WHITE at 3, Egypt-street, Warrington, under the style of "H. B. White & Sons," and the practice as a solicitor carried on by SIDNEY WALLHEAD at 5, Egypt-street, Warrington, under the style of "Spencer Wallhead & Son," have been amalgamated as and from 1st October, 1919, and the said Geo. F. F. White, E. Aubrey White and Sidney Wallhead will, as and from that date, practise in partnership at 15, Bold-street, Warrington, under the style of "H. B. White, Sons & Wallhead."

Dissolutions.

HERBERT J. DAVIS and ALBERT E. BAUCHER, solicitors (Herbert J. Davis & Co.), 36, Dale-street, Liverpool, and at Wigan, Jan. 1. The said Herbert J. Davis will continue to practise at 36, Dale-street, Liverpool, and the said Albert E. Baucher at Wigan.

Monday, November 24th, at Leeds.
